

ISRAEL IS DOOMED

Back in 1967 the American media went wild with praise of Israel's military might. The weekly news magazines published photos of Israel's Defense Minister Moshe Dayan with his glamorous black eyepatch. Dayan was hailed as the greatest military genius since Napoleon. Great contempt was expressed for the Arabs. Leon Uris published a blatantly boastful book entitled STRIKE, ZION! We COMMON SENSE people were not born yesterday. We know how to appraise a military-geopolitical situation accurately. We said back in 1967 that Israel had not won a great victory; on the contrary, Israel had suffered a staggering defeat.

Events have borne out our projection. The Republic of Israel is clearly doomed. It is time for even the Jews to face the fact that the Zionist pipe dream has to be given up. The military tide is turning against Israel. Moshe Dayan, the man with the glamorous black eyepatch, will now have the opportunity to try to prove that he is the greatest military genius since Napoleon.

Let us now examine the military problem which confronts Dayan. It will be helpful to have a map of the Mediterranean area at hand. Find Algeria, Libya, and Egypt on the map. Mark the naval base at Mers-el-Kebir. Also note Libya carefully. Back in 1967 the U.S. Air Force possessed Wheelus Airforce Base in Libya. We no longer do.

"Jews have always been the victims of their leaders. These leaders constituted the Sanhedrin in Jesus time just as they do today. They work through Zionism, but the force that keeps them together is wealth. Jews are being led to slaughter in Palestine to protect the wealth of their leaders here."—Henry H. Klein, (1947) prominent Jewish lawyer.

We were invited to leave because of our pro-Israel attitude in the 1967 war. Algeria is allowing the U.S.S.R. to use the French Naval Base at Mers-el-Kebir, only 300 miles from Gibraltar. Now let us see what Dayan can do? If he decides to fight them, he cannot win with a battle in the Sinai Desert where he won the 1967 war. He will have to march all the way to Algiers. He could easily find himself fighting a very tough battle a thousand miles from Israel, with his supply lines running through hostile territory. When he arrives in Algeria, he might find himself fighting the Soviet Union over the Mers-el-Kebir Naval Base. He would have to commit all his forces to such a battle, leaving his home base in Israel virtually undefended. Jordan, Iraq, Lebanon and Syria could march into Israel and proceed to govern or slaughter the civilian population. In fact, Dayan has not the means to invade the "hostility belt" which extends across North Africa. Israel can be blockaded from both the Mediterranean and Red Sea sides and can be cut off from the rest of the world. Israel will not be able to do anything about it.

In 1967 Israel expressed great contempt for the Arab fighting forces. The Egyptian forces were poorly trained in 1967. The Jews tried to foster the belief that Arabs are inferior and forever untrainable. This is not so. Sir John Bagot Glubb proved how well Arabs can be trained with his famous Arab Legion. The training problem which faces the Arabs is a common problem of modern military forces. It is a matter of training fighting men to use modern technological devices. This is not merely a problem of overcoming technological ignorance; it is more complex than that. Psychologically, man is best fitted for waging war with stone clubs. The good "Gung Ho" fighting man is often something of a meathead. The good technician must be something of an egghead. Frankly, the good technician sometimes is not a very good fighting man; his training is too one-sided. The problem of the officer training a technological fighting force is to achieve a good balance between meathead ferocity and egghead technical competence. The good, tough meathead may be a fine, brave fighter; but put him in a tank, and he may neglect the cooling system, so that the motor conks out at a critical time; his radio may not work, and he may miss a crucial order from his Command. Put the egghead in a tank, and the motor will work fine; the radio will be in perfect order; but he may flunk the crucial task of facing up to heavy enemy fire. The good technological fighter must be practically a schizoid type; he must be both meathead and egghead.

The Russian military missions now training the Arabs are especially good at this kind of thing. They have faced the problem of training Russian peasants who never saw an electric light in the problems of intricate modern arms systems. They know how to do it quite well. When I was in Berlin shortly after World War II, some of the people told me that Russian peasant troops would grab table lamps and expect them to illuminate somehow without being plugged in. Nevertheless, the Red Army has been quite successful in teaching the brave, meathead peasant the intricate requirements of technological war.

The Arab armed forces will be trained successfully. They will outnumber the Israelis by a wide margin. They are just as tough and just as brave as the Yids. Their training problem is not one peculiar to the Arabs; it is a problem common to all technological fighting forces. I can walk three times around the deck of a warship, of any nation, and tell you, without seeing their "Radio Central," whether or not their communications are any good. A talent like this can get you into bad trouble. Once upon a time I told the C.O. of a warship where I had been a guest, "Your communications are no blankety-blank good." The C.O. was properly offended by my rudeness. I became PERSONA NON GRATA and was no longer able to bum good meals from the officers' wardroom. I was rueful about this, since the restaurants in that particular foreign port were awful. Nevertheless, I was right. The C.O. of that ship retired from the Navy as a Captain instead of a Rear Admiral. He failed to get his broad stripe because his communications failed during a vital mission and his ship was as useless to his task force as a fifth wheel. He had a fine meathead fighting ship; he needed a better sprinkling of eggheads in some of his technical departments. You cannot simply "Command" that vital complex technological jobs be done; you must have people capable of doing such tasks.

When the Arabs have licked this particular training problem, they will also soundly lick the Republic of Israel. Can the U.S.A. help Israel? Certainly Nixon would like to help Israel. Nixon apparently considers the Voice of Kissinger as the Voice of God. The fact is that the U.S.A. cannot operate successfully in the Middle East. We are too bitterly hated. We cannot combine military action with viable political policy. Israel cannot count upon effective military aid from the United States. However eager Nixon may be to lick the Jewish boots, he will not be able to do anything. Israel and the U.S.A. share a joint total bankruptcy of policy in the Middle East.

The Zionist experiment must be liquidated. The only real question is how. The matter could end in a mass slaughter of all the Jews now living in Israel. Perhaps the Jews, when they are at the mercy of the Arabs and the U.S.S.R., will try to bargain with the U.S.S.R. They will place the powers of World Jewry at the disposal of the U.S.S.R. in return for the safety of Israel. In order to make such a bargain, they will have to surrender completely to Soviet purposes, which are fundamentally anti-Semitic. The military situation of Israel is rapidly becoming impossible. The Jewish military boasts of 1967 will have to be retracted. Zionism has failed because it was a badly conceived project from the start. For the matter of that, numerous intelligent Jews

"Jewish nationalists have mistreated Arabs and have uprooted Jews throughout the world to create manpower for Israel . . . Zionists have spent millions of dollars in charity money to propagandize the press, publishers and Christian clergy." — Moshe Menuhin, Jewish scholar.

foresaw the failure of Zionism and were among its bitterest opponents. The Zionist gang bulldozed all opposition, both Jewish and Gentile. Do not think that Zionism was solely a Jewish project. Some of the biggest of the Zionists are wealthy Goyim. Zionism is a corrupt secular racket based upon an ancient religious idea; or, rather, the perversion of an ancient religious idea. The ordinary, unthinking, workaday Jew is as much a victim of this vicious racket as the ordinary, workaday Arab. The big-time Zionists are not true believers in the ancient Jewish religion. They are in the grip of an arid, materialistic cynicism. They are in fact apostate Jews rather than true believers.

The Zionists say that "The notorious hate-paper COMMON SENSE is a right-wing disreputable anti-Semitic smear sheet." We are intellectually competent and rather cold-blooded people when it comes to dealing with facts. The Jews will not be able to ignore the facts which we have presented here, because these facts will explode quickly into actions which will shake the world geopolitical situation. There can be no question of continuing the Zionist experiment successfully. Even the Jews must now begin to think of ways to liquidate Zionism. Let us hear no more boasts about Israel's "Terrible Swift Sword." Israel faces military disaster from every side. Efforts to continue the Zionist folly can only result in disaster.
